Non-Personal Information Collected on the Website:

We constantly seek to make improvements to the Website. As part of these efforts, we collect and analyze certain "Aggregate Information" (information that does not allow us to identify a specific individual such as demographic information, purchase categories (e.g., books), or visitors using a particular browser to access the Website) about how visitors use the Website.

When you visit our Website, we may collect various types of technical data. This data includes (but is not limited to) domain and/or Web browser information. We may track which Website you visited before arriving at the Website and the Website you link to when you leave the Website. We may also keep a record of which pages of the Website you visit, and how long you spend on each page. We log IP addresses, which are the locations of computers or networks on the Internet, and analyze them in order to improve the value of our Website. We also collect aggregate numbers of page hits in order to track the popularity of certain pages and improve the value of our Website.

We collect this non-Personal, anonymous information about your use of our Website through the use of "cookies," and other technologies on the Website. Cookies are small pieces of information that our server places on a visitor's computer hard drive to enable that person to more easily communicate and interact with the Website and to provide us with important information on how visitors use the Website. For example, we will place a cookie on a visitor's computer when he/she visits the Website. The next time that person visits the Website using the same computer; our server will recognize the cookie and the visitor. We will also use cookies to collect information about a Website user who visits the Website without signing-in (or who signs-out but continues visiting the Website). Further, cookies and other technologies are used in email messages sent involving delivery and marketing and at our Website to help us measure the effectiveness of our advertising and how visitors use our Website. With respect to ads, should they be included in the Website, information about your visits to this Website, such as number of times you have viewed an ad (but not your name, address, or other personal information), may be used to serve ads to you. For more information about how to "opt-out" of these ad cookies, please contact legal@sonicommmedia.com. Many web browsers are automatically set to accept cookies. You may change your browser settings to either reject cookies or notify you when a cookie is about to be placed on your computer. Please note, however, that rejecting cookies while visiting the Website may result in certain parts of the Website not operating correctly or as efficiently as if they were allowed. Cookies must be enabled in order to register with the Website. The information collected by cookies helps us generate content responsive to your interests and also allows us to statistically monitor how many people are using our Website and for what purpose. We do not gather, request, record, require, collect or track any Internet users' Personally Identifiable Information through these processes. If you have set your browser setting to refuse cookies, then we cannot put a cookie on your computer. You can still participate in some of our online activities if your browser refuses cookies. However, if a Website cookie is not present, it will limit our ability to customize our Website for you, deliver a better online experience and improve the features of our Website.
